Lawn and Garden

Life (Lawn & Garden) Style

By Alexandria Masters

There is a harmony in autumn, and a luster in its sky, which through the summer is not heard or seen, as if it could not be, as if it had not been! ~Percy Bysshe Shelley

Autumn is by far my favorite season of the entire year. I so look forward to the smells, the sights, the slight chill in the air. And, pumpkin flavored everything! This time of year is great for going on Sunday drives—every day of the week! I love driving up to Flagstaff, usually by way of Sedona, to check out all the vibrant colors of fall. This is also a great opportunity to pick out which trees have the best fall color as I consider planting them in my yard. If you want that beauty in your own backyard, choose trees that have beautiful autumnal fire.

Fall colors are best when the weather cooperates. For leaves to turn scarlet, gold, yellow, orange, red and purple, trees need cool nights followed by warm, bright, sunny days. But, trees also need to be healthy, and should be in open areas where they get plenty of sunlight. Another factor that helps create glorious fall color is the delay of a hard freeze. Leaf color tends to be poor during fall seasons when there has been mostly cloudy, rainy and warm weather, and when there has been an early hard freeze.

Seasonal Suggestions for the month of September

Home: Move your tropical plants indoors. Do not wait for frost warnings to move your plants inside for the winter. Temperatures of 45° F or lower can damage many tropical houseplants and delicate herbs. Before bringing them inside, be sure to spray them down to get rid of any bugs that may have settled in to the soil. Choose a bright, sunny window for these plants to cozy into for winter. This will also help to boost your spirits with all the green you will get to see every day!

Lawn: Banish those dandelions! Dandelions are perennial weeds that live from year to year, no matter what you do to them. As the summer heat begins to dissipate, nutritional resources are pulled from the leaves into the root, so any chemicals applied to the leaves will be directed right into the root. This provides a more complete kill than in spring applications, and it is your opportunity to banish them from your yard.

Garden: Allow plants to finish the summer growth cycle in a normal manner. Never encourage growth with heavy applications of fertilizer or excessive pruning at this time. Plants will delay their dormancy process that has already begun in anticipation of winter in the months ahead. New growth can be injured by an early freeze.

And... Time to plant a tree, or two, or three... Surprisingly late fall into early winter is actually the best time for planting trees. It gives them all winter and into spring to grow an extensive root system before the hot summer months come. This also means better drought tolerance. It can be a fun time to shop for trees because you get to see which plants offer the most colorful fall blaze. And, be sure to set up a watering schedule to ensure they are well taken care of all season.

“ A true connoisseur of customer care, Dena makes the real estate world user friendly as her exceptional knowledge and experience are surpassed only by her competence and alacrity. She was promptly responsive, kept us well informed, and was most accommodating in the process.

If you want purposed professionalism, integrity, and a true advocate, then ask for Dena by name, accept no substitutes! We were very pleased with our experience!

John C. on Trulia

“ The most professional, caring agent I have ever done business with. Very, very knowledgeable and helpful and has great ideas to make things happen. Is always extremely positive and has many resources at her disposal to help take care of any issues or problems. I highly recommend Dena for any aspect of real estate.
